

PERSPECTIVES FROM SOCIAL ECONOMICS

SERIES EDITOR: MARK D. WHITE

DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE, ECONOMICS, AND PHILOSOPHY
COLLEGE OF STATEN ISLAND/CUNY

In the current economic, financial, and political climate, recognizing and studying the ethical and social aspects of the economy are more important than ever. Social economics has long emphasized these very aspects, and can provide unique perspectives on issues of critical importance to citizens, businesses, and governments around the world. This series will feature a sharp discussion of the explicit ethical/social components of important policy and social issues, drawing on the varied approaches used by social economists around the world. Through a strong mix of outward-looking books, focusing on the insights of social economics to contemporary policy and social issues, and inward-looking books, focusing on the philosophy and methodology of social economics itself, this series will be of enormous value to both social economists and policy makers.

MARK D. WHITE is a professor in the Department of Political Science, Economics, and Philosophy at the College of Staten Island/CUNY, where he teaches courses in economics, philosophy, and law. He has authored dozens of journal articles and book chapters in the intersections between these fields, and has edited a number of books on the subjects, including Ethics and Economics: New Perspectives (with Irene van Staveren, 2009), Theoretical Foundations of Law and Economics (2009), and The Thief of Time: Philosophical Essays on Procrastination (with Chrisoula Andreou, 2010).
